TRICKS

IT'S just as much a TRICK to produce proper tailoring as to perform marvelous feats in juggling or balancing. Takes skill and experience and constant practice to become perfect.

We're not jugglers—just plain tailors. But our tailoring is always well balanced—and we're expert in the business through long experience and constant studying of tailoring conditions.

We know the little tricks of the trade that enable us to afford better construction, style, and satisfaction. We're natural-born leaders when it comes to making clothes. Fall assortments await criticism.

DEBUTANTE TO REIGN

Coming-Out Parties Feature of Social Season.

TEAS ARE STILL IN FAVOR

Largest Company of Buds in Five Years. Many of Them Bearing Names of Oldest Washington Families—The Misses Shonts to Be Members of Winter Colony.

Following a custom of many years, the coming social season will have its opening weeks pre-empted by the debutantes who are returning even earlier than usual from her summer travels to nearly every habitable part of the globe, but usually by way of Paris or New York, with boxes and boxes of exquisite millinery capable of converting the school girl of June into the thoroughly equipped society woman of November.

For the buds of 1906 are all clever girls, with a thorough appreciation of the value of clothes, who accept the wisdom of Thomas Carlyle, with the conviction of Bob Acres that "clothes do make a difference," and the least worldly minded of the score or more of future belles has spent many precious hours in the selection of her first complete wardrobe of ball and dinner gowns, demi-toilets, the chief of which is, of course, the coming-out gown, visiting costume of the elaborate model that her youthful heart has heretofore only dreamed of, evening wraps and smart morning jackets, hats, boots, and shoes of endless variety, with the hundred and one chiffons and baubles which go to make up what some one describes as the luxurious necessities of the bud of today.

Again, showing Washington's devotion to well-established custom, it has been decided that the regulation form of presentation shall be a tea of the old-fashioned hospitable sort, which is as firmly rooted in Washington society as the President's reception on New Year's Day and as important to the girl herself as her first bachelor's cotillon.

Balls Later in Season.

In several instances there will be balls later in the season to supplement the more general afternoon entertainment, with at least two smart cotillions, all in the interest of the largest company of buds known in five years. Of the buds themselves there is an infinite variety, with a marked predominance of the home-grown variety, which, if not always a native of the District, have grown to womanhood in the shadow of the Monument, and consequently is adaptable and charming as only the atmosphere of a cosmopolitan city can make her. For the white muslin ingenue has passed entirely off the scene in Washington, where a candidate for social honors even in the first month of her first season must be as acceptable a dinner guest as a cotillon partner, as quick to find her bearings in a luncheon company of her mother's contemporaries as among her own, capable and willing to take a hand at bridge to accommodate older friends, and past mistress in the knowledge of football, if she wishes to share the society of her brothers and their friends.

How Success Is Won.

And something more must the girl of the hour possess to achieve real success, and that is a kind heart or its only substitute, never failing good manners, without which it is impossible to please society, to society's credit, be it said. It is happy to note in this connection that the average Washington girl is extremely well mannered, whether by nature or by grace, and as a consequence all really popular women are unselfish women as well, and even in the rush of her first season many a girl will find time to continue her ministrations to the sick, the afflicted, and the poor, whether in some favorite institution or unostentatiously in her own home. Altogether the Washington debutante is about the most finished product in young womanhood as any country can present, with this season's contribution to the social life of the Capital fully up to the established standard of wit and beauty.

The following list, which, although not quite complete by reason of unsettled plans in several families, gives a very fair idea of what the early season has in store for all the socially inclined, for each and every one of these young girls is the center of an admiring circle of friends, and for all of them will be extended a most cordial greeting.

List Contains Old Names.

Here will be found a number of names identified with the earliest history of Washington, which ought to be a complete refutation of that frequent misstatement that our social world changes with each administration, and that Washington has no fixed stars in its social firmament.

Miss Evelyn Chew, daughter of Mr. John Chew, and granddaughter of Mrs. Tilton J. Coffee, 1718 K street.

Miss Katharine Clabaugh, daughter of Judge and Mrs. H. M. Clabaugh, 1342 Mintwood place.

and Mrs. John R. Williams, 2112 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Helen Wilson, daughter of Mr. James Wilson, 208 G street.

Miss Laura Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wells, 202 R street.

The Misses Shonts, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shonts, will be among the younger belles of the coming winter, although, strictly speaking, not in the debutante class, as Mrs. Shonts and her daughter, who return to Washington in the next few weeks, enjoyed not only the distinction of presentation at the court of St. James last summer, but were the recipients of many other distinguished attentions in London, where they were the special proteges of Mrs. Reid, wife of the Ambassador from the United States.

After the London season Mrs. Shonts and the Misses Shonts traveled extensively on the continent. Their Washington home will be the residence of Mrs. W. Clarke Whittemore, on New Hampshire avenue, last year occupied by Senator and Mrs. Dryden.

The Misses Shonts are not strangers in Washington, having been educated at Mt. Vernon Seminary. Mrs. Shonts has been a frequent visitor to Washington since her husband's appointment to the chairmanship of the Panama Canal Commission.

The opening of the Supreme Court today will be preceded by a call on the President by the Chief Justice and his associates, all of whom returned to town in the past week.

Although still in mourning, Chief Justice Fuller will re-open his house to society this winter. His daughter, Mrs. S. M. Moore, of Chicago, will be with him during the season.

Mrs. McKenna, wife of Justice McKenna, is visiting their daughter, Mrs. Davenport Brown, of Boston. Justice and Mrs. McKenna will shortly give up their residence on Rhode Island avenue and take an apartment at the Connecticut for the winter.

The Japanese Ambassador and Viscountess Aoki, who concluded the lease of the Sherman residence, 1221 K street, a few days ago, will take possession of that property during the present week.

Representative and Mrs. Sibley, the present tenants, have consented to extend their lease, which does not expire until the spring. As the Viscount has taken this house purely for residence purposes, the offices of the embassy will continue at 1310 N street, which has long served as the Japanese Legation, and is owned by the Mikado's government.

The Belgian Minister and Baroness Stoecheur have returned from Hamilton, Mass., where they passed the summer, and have opened their legation on H street.

Baron Speck von Sternburg, Ambassador from Germany, returned yesterday to Beverly Falls, Mass., where Baroness von Sternburg will remain until the opening of the Embassy in this city, about October 15.

The Minister to The Hague, Hon. David Jayne Hill and Mrs. Hill will conclude a ten days' visit at the Arlington tomorrow, when they leave for New York, to make a series of interesting visits in that vicinity before sailing for Holland on October 24. Mr. Hill was called to America to take part in a conference in the State Department, where he has been on duty since his arrival in Washington. He will return here before sailing. This being Mrs. Hill's first visit since her departure four years ago, she has been the recipient of much attention from a large circle of friends who remember her as one of the very gracious hostesses of the McKinley administration, when her husband was Assistant Secretary of State.

Rear Admiral Walker and family have returned to their home, 1202 Eighteenth street, for the winter.

The marriage of Miss Blanche Darr, of this city, to Mr. James Hart, of Cincinnati, will take place Wednesday, October 24, at Port Hope, Ontario, where the bride-elect and her mother have been passing the early autumn after a summer at Coburg. The marriage will take place at the Roman Catholic Church, and be followed by a wedding breakfast at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Roland J. Hemmick, life-long friends of the bride. The latter is the daughter of the late Gen. Joseph E. Darr, formerly of Cincinnati, but more recently of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Benet, of Paris, who have been spending a week at the Graton, left yesterday for a trip to the Pacific Coast and visit to Maj. Benet at Benicia Barracks, Cal. They will return to Washington before sailing for home.

Medical Director John C. Boyd, U. S. N., with Mrs. Boyd and family, returned on Saturday from three months' travel in Europe.

THERE are few stores in America—and assuredly none in the South—showing such extensive assortments in the above named lines of merchandise as this establishment.

But it is as much the QUALITY as the completeness of stocks that maintains this store's leadership. Nothing in the least undesirable finds a place here. It is an undeviating policy of the house to rigidly exclude "seconds" from its stocks, thereby insuring the purchaser a satisfactory article, whether the expenditure be great or small.

The various lines are now replete with the season's newest and most desirable wares from noted American and European centers of production. We shall be pleased to have you inspect same at your convenience.
